SALT is much wanted in this state, and the people, that have convenient places for making it, cannot make any great quantity for want of proper pans to boil it down in.—This is therefore to acquaint all persons who have a mind to make salt, that the subscriber will furnish them with pans ready made of sheet iron, and engaged tight, to contain any number of gallons, they giving for each pan the full of it of good merchantable salt; and to encourage many to carry on these most necessary works, he will deliver any person pans, who will give him good security that they will (after allowing them sufficient time to make it) deliver him as many gallons of salt as the pans they take contain.
